According to the requests of the Parties Eurasian Economic Commission (hereinafter referred to as Commission) may define the cases and procedure of taking measures on IPR protection in point of the individual categories of goods under the special customs procedure.

In accordance with article 253 of the EAEU CC, the special customs procedure is the customs procedure which is applied to particular categories of foreign goods and goods of the EAEU, which are transferred through the customs border of the EAEU, are present and (or) are used in or out the customs territory of the EAEU without payment of customs duties, taxes, special or antidumping or compensation duties complying with the terms and conditions of placement and use of goods under this special customs procedure.

The special customs procedure is applied to various categories of goods, including the foreign goods transferred through the customs border of the EAEU, intended for the organization of official international exhibitions, the characteristics of which are determined by the Commission.

In accordance with article 124 CC of EAEU the basic Customs authority’s measures to protect the rights of right holders are measures that are connected with the suspension of release of goods.

The Customs authorities have the right to suspend the release of goods containing intellectual property objects, that are not included in a Single customs register of intellectual property objects of member states or national customs register of intellectual property objects, which is maintained by the customs authority of the member state of whose territory where the goods are placed under customs procedures, without the right holder's application in accordance with the legislation on customs regulation of the member states.

Thus, the Customs authorities apply protection measures of IPR related to the suspension of release of goods placed under the customs procedure of temporary importation, except for those goods which the Eurasian economic Commission determines the appliance of the special customs procedure.
